FLEET Street photographer Harry Benson travelled to Paris with The Beatles in 1964 and snapped their pillow fight (right) at the swanky George V Hotel. Now that picture is on the cover of a coffee table book from Taschen, called Harry Benson: The Beatles. New York-based Benson, 84, appointed CBE in 2009, is to receive an honorary doctorate from the University of St Andrews. As a young newspaperman in Glasgow, he visited in prison the serial killer Peter Manuel, recalling: 'He wrote to me but my mother burned the letters before I saw them, saying "We don't want to have dealings with this type of person".'
