STICKY PAGES

"Terry Richardson is one of the most sought-after fashion photographers today. His pictures can be seen everywhere from the latest Gucci campaigns to Vice magazine. "His pictures are totally honest. They don't hide anything. By having them in a commercial context, they act as a Trojan horse that transcends the original format."

"Those pictures are sick. You ought to be locked up. You're deranged and a danger to others. Disgusting."

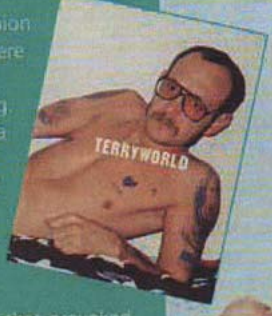

The first quote is from a who's who of famous photographers, the second from an arty-farty discussion of Richardson's new book, Terryworld. The last is posted by someone who wandered into a his website.

We're not sure if it was the road-kill snaps or the cock-in-a-handburger that provoked the tarty, but it takes a guy with talent to make a pic of a chick with a banana up her twats, fruit, cocks in places that God and kitchen hygiene never intended, oh, and plenty of jism. Richardson's so keen on drenched tits and the old come-dripping-off-the-chin shot, it's a miracle these pages aren't stuck fast together.

There's also plenty of shots of Terry on the job. Not actual fucking, because that's probably just a minor aspect of sex in Terry's world, but one look at that twisted grin and the amazing things he's persuading various women to do, and you know that:

a) this guy has taken a lot of drugs; and b) everyone's having a hell of a time.
