Sarah Jessica Parker to flash her black lacy undies to commuters on a New York subway train.

His name is David LaChapelle and if you're an A-list celeb, he's your A-list photographer.

Mohammed Ali, Elizabeth Taylor, Kylie Minogue and Kate Moss are just some of the names he's captured in rude, nude or downright bizarre poses.

Now the most famous shots are being reprinted in his new book, Artists & Prostitutes. And at £1,200, you'll need an A-list salary to get one of 2,500 signed copies published in April. But save your pennies - here's our sneak preview of some of the world's biggest names dressed in less to impress.

David - known for his glossy, bright images - caught Angelina Jolie pre-Brad Pitt and pre-pregnancy horsing around in a field topless in 2001. Madonna looked more exotic than erotic for her video collection cover in 1999.

David stripped his favourite subject, Baywatch babe Pamela Anderson, down to biker boots.

He says: "She is one of the most down to earth real people I have ever met. Always the same. Funny, sweet, smart."

David, 42, adds: "I never wanted to be famous - I always wanted to take famous photographs."

● Artists & Prostitutes is published by TASCHEN (www.taschen.com). Call 0207 845 8585 for special pre-order price of £850 from £1,200 before April 2006. Each copy is signed and numbered by David LaChapelle. Only 2,500 printed.
