What you get: Diaries and collages, including five foldouts, from the renowned photographer and artist Peter Beard. His career has taken him from being on the road with the Rolling Stones and shooting fashion for Vogue to groundbreaking wildlife photography in Africa and his extraordinary illustrated diaries and collages. The book also includes an essay by critic Owen Edwards and an interview with Beard himself. Another book with its own stand.

Who to buy it for: People who couldn't afford the 250-copy, individually numbered and signed, leather-bound Collector's Edition, the first 125 of which came with its own Beard print, which has already sold out. It cost £3,500.
