Edited by Charlotte and Peter Fiell, this book is comprised of a collection of works from 100 of today's most exciting graphic designers. The art comes in many shapes and forms, from adverts to posters, websites to packaging, and ranges from telling strong political messages to light-hearted vibes. Artists featured include the likes of Jonathan Barnbrook and Peter Saville. The book is being hailed as "absolutely essential to anyone interested in the power of images" and we're actually inclined to agree. Its purpose is not to dictate, but rather to inspire and show fellow artists the kind of work that is happening today. Don't mistake this as simply a coffee-table book though, as it will keep you coming back for more.
