Although he has photographed throughout South America and around the globe, Sebastião Salgado has shot more than 40 reportage works, over a period of 30 years, across Africa.

This book brings together those photos, and divides Africa into three geographical parts. Text is provided by renowned Mozambique novelist Mia Couto, who reflects on the effects of colonisation and the consequences of economic, social and environmental crises. The photographs are very typical Salgado's style: black & white, harrowing, beautiful.
