

When Modernism was new

Arts & Architecture, the seminal design magazine that put California Modernism on the map during the 1940s, has been lovingly republished by Taschen in a gorgeous facsimile edition. The first edition of Arts & Architecture, 1945–54: The Complete Reprint collects the first 10 years, all 118 issues, bound in 10 separate boxes. Each box contains a complete year's publication of Arts & Architecture. The collection begins with the 1945 announcement of the Case Study House Program, a groundbreaking showcase for innovative uses of low-cost materials, modern design and cutting-edge

American Architecture at the cusp of the go-go years. Before Neutra, Eames and Gehry became known solely by their last names, they were published in Arts & Architecture. The first facsimile edition will be published in an edition of 5,000 numbered copies, and will be followed by the companion volume covering the years 1955–1967.
