WIN!

EN The cover illustration for this week's Agenda is taken from the back cover of a book by the name of Horror Cinema, published by Taschen. It is a still from an obscure low-budget horror flick, William Castle's Strait-Jacket (1964), which will be shown at this month's Offscreen film festival. Aware as we are that true cinema buffs get almost as much fun out of reading about films as out of watching them, Agenda is raffling three copies of this handsomely illustrated coffee table book. Its authors explore almost a hundred years of horror film history, from silent classics such as Nosferatu and Haxan to more recent work like The Silence of the Lambs and Coppola's Dracula remake. They divide the films into categories such as "Slashers and Serial Killers", "Cannibals, Freaks and Hillbillies", and "The Monstrous-Feminine", which results in some surprising combinations of film titles. Guess what section contains Joan Crawford and her axe? Sitting comfortably in your reading chair? Send an e-mail, before 9 March, with the subject line "horror cinema", to win@bdw.be. The winners can collect the book themselves from the Taschen Store on the Zavel/Sablon. Good luck!
