
Bookends

Simple minds

One of the more unexpected parcels we've received recently came courtesy of German publisher Taschen: a little book, stamped with three uncomplicated words: 'Keel's Simple Diary'. What creator Philipp Keel reasoned was that most of us are simply too time poor, lazy, or uninspired to write a daily diary.

So instead, he came up with a format where the diarist has to tick a box, circle a thought, or answer yes or no to statements such as: 'You often spill stuff.' Check out www.simplediary.com to find out how to change the way you record your life.