

Santiago Calatrava:
Complete Works 1979-2009
By Philip Jodidio

(Taschen, $40)

By the year 2013, the World Trade Center Transportation Hub will be complete and Santiago Calatrava's name will be on the lips of the millions who will traverse its corridors every day. The hub will likely be one of architecture's most spectacular achievements. But until then, we've got the impressively prolific Jodidio's monograph to help us envision what's soon to come. But that is not the only project covered in this updated, compact version of Taschen's 2007 XL edition (the LRT Bridge in Jerusalem and the Fourth Bridge over the Canal Grande in Venice are also included). Nor are new projects the book's sole focus. So for those looking to get up-to-date with one of our most forward-thinking architects, this will do quite nicely.
