The Helmut Newton Foundation in Berlin has been showing the exhibition 'Helmut Newton Polaroids' since June 2011 with so much success it has just announced it will extend its run until May 20th 2012. More than 70.000 visitors have already walked the halls of the foundation and enjoyed the 300 photographs exposed. The exhibition showcases an overview of the legendary photographer's instant photography work, who used Polaroids extensively since the 1970s and throughout his career. Newton was very fond of the imperfection and spontaneity he was able to capture on Polaroids, so much so that he published an extraordinary book with Taschen in 1992 showcasing the photographs as a guideline for his career.
