

Gio Ponti, 1909.

Gio Ponti, 1910.

Gio with his wife Giulia Vimercati, 1921.

Gio Ponti, 1920.

With his wife and their son Giulio on the terrace at Via Brin, Milan, 1938.

At eight years old in 1899.

As an army officer in WWI, 1917.

Resuming his architecture studies, 1919.

Gio Ponti, 1934.

With his two elder daughters Lisa and Giovanna, 1928.

In Florence, 1920.

From left to right: Daria Guarnati, Luigi Licitra, Lisa Licitra Ponti, Matteo Licitra, Giulia Vimercati Ponti, Gio Ponti, and Lucia Tedeschi in Civate (Lecco), 1951.

With his daughter Lisa at her wedding to Luigi Licitra in Civate (Lecco), 1950.

With his daughter Lisa and Giovanna Mazzocchi at the Venice Biennale, 1948.

6
EIGHTEEN IMPORTANT MESSAGES
FOR A SPECIAL BOOK
Lisa Licitra Ponti

9
THE PROBLEM OF BEAUTY
Salvatore Licitra

GIOVANNI AND GIO
Stefano Casciani

12
Giovanni and Gio

16
Domus and Dom-ino

18
From Decorative Arts to Design

22
Italian Architecture and Fascism

24
From Novecento to Modernism

26
Architecture Is a Crystal

30
From Domus to Stile

34
Resurrection and Reconstruction

36
Organizing the Arts

40
Inventing Design

290
In Love with Architecture,
or the Obsession with Form

294
Criticism of Industrial Design

298
Superleggera: the Chair-Chair

302
Laudable Lightness: a House Like a Butterfly

306
Milan in the 1950s: Capital of Possibilities

308
The Industrialist, the Tower, and the Architect

314
Many Other Gios

PROJECTS

44
1920s

83
1930s

164
1940s

230
1950s

488
1960s

542
1970s

560
Biography

561
Epilogue

562
Index of Featured Projects

565
Endnotes